

Class of 2008 - Senior Class Precept 2007-2008

As the first senior class of the Bay School, we feel that it is important to help to begin a tradition that will be carried on by all senior classes in the years to come. The formative years, particularly for our class, are those that will greatly impact the future of our school. The traditions that begin with us will be passed along to future senior classes. To begin this school year, the Class of 2008 spent time on our senior retreat discussing which core value our class would adopt as our own. We have chosen to focus on one primary core value, one that reflects our greatest aspirations as a class and the convention that we most desire to leave behind. After a full group discussion, the senior class agreed that our precept will be:

We value intellectual curiosity; we encourage the pursuit of knowledge through communication and critical thinking. We value maintaining the physical surroundings of our learning environment.

To promote intellectual growth, a group of members of the class of 2008 has dedicated its time to upholding our goal. We have plans in motion to:

- Begin a tutoring program in which upperclassmen help freshmen and sophomores with their school work
- Morning meetings will include educational presentations by fellow students who are passionate about specifics that would not otherwise be covered in a conventional curriculum
- The senior class aims to uphold this value and we plan to dedicate our year to the continued search for knowledge at the heart of the Bay School community
